PRATTONIA 2013

Prattonia collected images, words and objects from the class of 2013 to piece together an authentic record of our collective Pratt experience.

This book is an artifact of artifacts. Images are not as they seem. Words do not have to seem like what they are. Your captions are just as valid as ours. Are photos and memories the same thing? Images can be narratives. Nothing fits perfectly. Same book different meanings. We are not the same. But narratives can overlap. Straight lines are overrated.

Honestly.

Dear Pratt Class of 2013,

This year's Prattonia celebrates individuality and the tremendous range in your backgrounds, majors, tastes, and viewpoints. You have worked very hard during your years at Pratt – honing your personal skills and vision that are reflected in the vital spirit of these stories and photos. I have also had the great pleasure to get to know many of you and can say with confidence that your individuality is your gift to the world – and to Pratt! Together, you have created a passionate creative community.

Kudos and special thanks to the student designers for creating such an exciting forum for self-expression. This book is a keepsake that I hope you will treasure as a token of pride as Pratt alumni.

Your graduation from Pratt is just the beginning of a long relationship with the Institute. I hope each of you will connect with the Office of Alumni Relations and remain a part of the Pratt community. We look forward to hearing about your achievements in the years to come. Return soon and often to visit your alma mater.

Congratulations, Pratt Class of 2013! I wish you all the very best in your future endeavors and will see each of you on the stage of Radio City Music Hall.

Best wishes,

Thomas F. Schutte
President

This book would not be possible without the patience and wisdom of friends, colleagues, faculty, and staff members. The editors would first like to thank all the students who attended the photo sessions and sent in submissions.

Frank, Gary, and Phil, thanks for keeping it real and for pushing us beyond the expected.

Kathleen, Emma, Michael, and Philip, thanks for believing in us, for navigating Pratt bureaucracy, for the timely words of encouragement and dry humor. A million Goldfish to Cecilia for not murdering/firing us — you're the best!

Special thanks goes out to Marteinn at Oddi, photo technicians Pat, Sandy and Martin, Tala, Michelle, Cedric at PMC, Charlotte in the President's office, John in the Registrar's office, Sam, Winston, Chris, Manuela, and our parents.

Chris, we can't thank you enough for the photos (and your sexy playlist) — we couldn't have done this without you.

In memory of Lun Lau, Thank you for always having faith and believing in hard work, love, and integrity.

I feel patience for the hook. A rose when ambushed. I tell everyone this is my last box office hit. Colossal, a trip, watching me will make you want nothing, although after, when you get home, you will see the aura of gold and silver all around you. My own special spiritual journey in 3D! It is pure heat and spans from coast to coast. In the opening scene I am limping toward the bathroom and calling out for a pet that died in my youth. Spoiled, I am deranged, I toil at the steps and forget how many people I love are alive. The hole moves. I hear the wings before I see them. A little voice to unravel the spool. I'm not wrong. Sun down on these highway dreams. If I knew you were going to be this leafless oak I would have never texted you. And if I ever had anyone like that I'd lock them up on a cliff. I'd be hunkered and eating berries. Now how would that look? How would I fly that high? The movie progresses, leaves fall too early in the park scenes while girls with too much hair explain variations within the universal, but not the universal itself. I can't forget this is all projected on a screen and people get to eat while watching me. Lost in an opus the boy I wanted to love lived all the way inside. White trash palace. He is manic so I am manic, or why I don't feel like getting out of bed. Let me hang our clothes up to dry on that cliff near the clearing. Knicked are my girl hands picking the burrs off of his Hanes v-neck. Trying to fill that hole from the outside. In the dark the audience senses I am a misanchored ship, but that I'll make the best of it. The breath in my chest is a little bee. And after forty-five minutes I admit faults, a fossil dug up. Annie, this moment is your entire world and shame is not a part of it! A montage of myself budgeting my money, calling my mother once a week, and exercising everyday ensues. Cathartic and truly living life! I go out more. I feel like the best-looking puppy in all of Brooklyn. The climax occurs when I am at IKEA getting a new rug because I have made new friends and a Cranberries song comes on and reminds me of him so there's that moment of happiness, I feel full again like Saturday morning when everyone has decided to mow their lawn. But he has chosen a campsite other than my own. There is a piano crescendo near the spot where they sell cinnamon buns and I realize that it's been my coping strategies that have been way off, not me as a person. There is no cost for me! I take myself by storm. The heavens accommodate the scariest pains and the truest hallucinations of the past all leading toward one who creates being out of nothing. A chief of my own tribe. In the final scene I'm explaining (I've also been writing every day and working on multiple projects) to one of my many bearded suitors that makes artisan furniture that maybe genius is a dynamic activity rather than a static essence. On chalkboards they will continue to draw skulls and invite me to their parties, boys with very long hair, if they could envision themselves with that extra joy!

They can transform! In the aftermath of the movie premiere I, bled from a bed, exist because of patience. I vow to set forth pure lands. The critics feel it is impossible to draw conclusions or build a shrine to so obvious a wound. But as I eat my alpha breakfast in the backcountry, the dawn treats me with respect. Once thought mountain whore and how come I don't want the same things? I heard the wings before I saw them. So there I am on Letterman with my drums and everyone says I look great. What else is camping in the forests? The desire to always be arriving. What oceans to swim in! I turn to my good side. A meadow that knows it's a meadow. What could this mean for the teens? Patience. Breath collecting in the corners of girls' rooms, I pull the sword that cools, I pull it from the boulder and I keep it in my belt and never use it. Miraculous. Holding. Like a delta romance marked by a worthy shrub. This whole experience has really opened my eyes, I'm starting to see a little bit of Meryl Streep in everyone I know, a clearing in the woods, five out of five stars, where life is misplaced, strange and rocking.

Environment is very important for my works. I always see surrounding circumstance changing everyday. I try to describe the relationship between them with my memory at that time.

Recently, I have been working on a photography series on the theme of manmade realities. These works piece together edited landscapes born out of the real and then displaced from their mundane environments to become part of an idealized and nostalgic world, fragments of a dream or a forgotten memory. My photographs portray empty, still and detached landscapes that open into a world removed from time. Drawing from themes of longing and isolation, I have created idealized landscapes that are devoid of movement; they exist somewhere in the boundary between the real and the imagined.

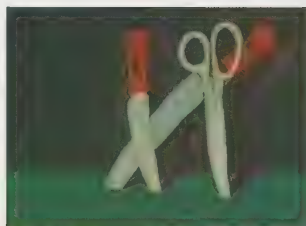

In the project "The Mall Project; Operated Reality", the main theme is finding my memory between reality and imagination, both artificial and natural. Actually, I studied environmental engineering in South Korea. So I want to represent photographically that is associated with my major. I am making the project by combining my own point of view with ordinary people's way of thinking. This project started with artificial lights connected to the process of making traces. I think man's goal of existence is making artificial traces. In the present, humans make a lot of traces throughout their lives. They continuously make their traces. However, they might be unaware of making these traces because their trace has already become part of their everyday experience. There are many traces made by man and spread all around the world. These traces exist all around us. They might be famous structures, famous tour spots, or common places. I think all these things are man-made traces. Even now, mankind's leavings continuously create lots of traces.

RIB CAGE DAY
Lauren Rymer

You don't know what brought you back, but here you are in this room surrounded entirely by absolute zeros. You tell her she shouldn't take herself too seriously — after all she is a man in a dress. And thousands of planetary systems have born and died in her flesh. You order a drink of apparent magnitude and the bartender refuses you. In your blue shift you make a scene, but nothing that anyone will remember come tomorrow morning. Still, you are out on the street on hands and knees searching for whatever orbital elements were lost in the scuffle.

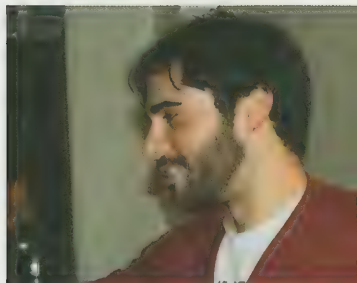

She is crouching over you with a smile on her face and runs down her flesh-toned pantyhose. You are asking her to come home with you. You want her to meet your mother. You think she might be the one. The two of you, a binary system, stumble through puddles of lamplight, her heels scraping pavement.

In the bathroom of a 24-hour Popeye's you make a confession to no one, hunched over the toilet. In your red shift you wipe your mouth with your sleeve while exiting the bathroom only to realize she is gone. Make a note about observational evidence of dark matter here. She left you a box of chicken, the plastic bag hanging off the bathroom door.

You are in retrograde and in the midst of what feels like the greatest loss of your life, you decide it is time to go home. Try to think about time in an astronomical sense. At the front door of your apartment you realize you don't have keys so you ring the doorbell. A young woman opens the door and leads you to bed. On your back, you can feel someone unbuttoning your shirt, and you close your eyes. The gibbous moon slowly waning.
